Game Summary:

Capo-Zero started out their season with an impressive easy win, as they scored the game's first five goals then coasted to victory. For one game, they quieted any urban legend talk of their team being a "cursed team." The Revolution were missing three players, including their best defenseman, and it showed as they struggled to find their offense and looked disorganized on defense. Chalk this one up to a "first game experience."

Talk about balanced scoring, Capo-Zero had five different goal scorers in this game.

Richie Pelletier scores his team's only goal to break up the shutout attempt.
