The Revolution

Game Summary:

Cam-A-Lot has their attack game going all game long, using their speed on the forecheck, while throwing shot after shot on net, as they get back to their winning ways.

For the Revolution, this loss may actually turn out to be a win for this team, as they struggle on offense early in this game, but stick to it with some team defense and great goaltending, to stay in this game right to the end. Is the defense scoring two of their goals, the spark needed to get their offense going?

Rookie Cam Long is the best player for his team this game, using his speed and scoring touch to score 2-goals while setting up another goal.

Tony Medeiros leads his team's defense all game, but also gets into the offense with 1-goal and 1-assist.

Derek Donegan scores his first goal of the season.

Derrick Power's hustle on the forecheck all game gets rewarded, as he scores the insurance goal with thirty-nine seconds to play to seal this game.

Manny Nunes scores a big powerplay goal late in the second period to shift the momentum to his team getting them back in this game.

RayDow and Rob Greene each score goals on bombs from the point.

Steve Silveira returns from IR makes his defensive presence felt all game, blocking a lot of shots and breaking up plays in his defensive zone.

Scott Rosato was the best player in this game, even though his team lost. If not for the exceptional play of Scott in net, this game could easily have been a blowout. Yes, he was that good. Get behind him Revolution if you want to turn your season around.
