Game Summary:

The Revolution, playing shorthanded down seven players, get two fill in players per the emergency IR policy, and break a two game losing streak by starting out quickly going up three goals and controlling this game, then hang on during the third period flurry by their opponent. More of the same for two periods by the freefalling Capo-Zero team, as they simply aren't scoring any goals (again) and lose their fourth straight game dropping into fifth place. Where are their top players during this scoring drought? They aren't producing. The good news and maybe a sign of things to come for this team is they score twice in the third period making this a game with a furious attack but come up just short (is this a sign of a team turnaround?).

Rookie Dan Poirier Sr. continues to make the most of his opportunity as a full time roster player and giving his new team some scoring depth as he scores 2-goals, giving him 5-goals scored in only three games played. Once he gets into playing shape, he could be a lethal scoring threat for this team down the stretch.

Manny Nunes continues to drive his team's offense as the playmaker, setting up 2-goals, extending his point scoring streak to four games.
