Game Summary:

Capo-Zero wins their third game out their last four heading into the playoffs as the 4th playoff seed, as the "sleeper team" who have shown they can win the close games; now they just need to get their offense back on track, as they already have the solid defense and goaltending. Cam-A-Lot finishes the season as the 6th playoff seed extending their losing streak to four games. Don't take this team lightly in the playoffs at your own peril. If they get a consistent full team at games, and get their offense going, they will compete. Their achilles heel all season has been a lack of roster players at games and breakdowns in the third period (especially when holding leads).

With only 3-assists to show for production in his last seven games, Gino Tammaro finally "woke up" from his dormant offensive production sleep just in time, to factor in all his teams goals, with 1-goal and 2-assists. To say that Gino has been MIA the second half of this season is an understatement. If this team wants to make a deep playoff run, they must get consistent big-game production from Gino.

Likewise, with only 2-goals and 2-assists his last nine games, Angelo De Luca, has also gone MIA on his team's lack of offense. Yet, he scores the game winning goal while his team is playing short-handed. It's time for Angelo to step up as team captain and lead the way by his production on the rink for an entire game!

Chris Ducharme finally gets rewarded on offense for his all-around consistent game by scoring a big tying goal for his team.

Jose Silva scores the game's first goal on a sweet goal in close.....now if he can only teach Lee Nogler how to do the same and finish his chances on a breakaway.
